SKETCHES OF LITTLE OLD NEW YORK BY O. O. McINTYRE

Telegram Bureau: Rooms 121-125 Hotel Majestic, West Seventy-second Street.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Bus boys in the large New York hotels are to get their first taste of American culture through the munificence of the New York board of education. They are to be helped upward on their path to becoming tuxedoed waiters and looking askance at the meagre tips through the continuation school plan.

The first class under the direction of Mrs. Florence Eagle, of the public schools, met at the Majestic this week and thirty-five young Greeks, Spaniards and Austrians who have been in this country from two weeks to two years were assigned to their desks.

They have individual desks, with slates and sponges. (The sponge is not significant.) They are taught to pronounce words, to read and ethics—which means politeness.

Nicholas Popolous was asked to write a word on the blackboard. He wrote it. It spelled "Tip."

"What have you written?" asked the teacher.

"What nobody ever gives me," he replied.

But in a few short years Nicholas will no doubt be getting his share of tips for most of the Broadway waiters started in as bus boys and many of them now ride around in limousines.

sines and have beautiful homes in the country.

Oscar, of the Waldorf, who started as a bus boy is soon to retire to his country place with a fortune that is said to be in the millions.

A family of newly rich who came from the social coze of the oil fields of Oklahoma have caused a great stir along the exclusive sections of Fifth avenue by buying ground for the erection of a palace which will be a cross between the Temple of Karmack and the Grand Central station.

It is their intention, it is said, to burst right into society and the upper circles are fearing they will for the man of the house has a bank account that will produce the wallop. They started off by entertaining Bohemia in the magenta and gold dining saloon but now they are entertaining some of the fringe of society.

The fear is that soon they will be entertaining social leaders. The head of the family has joined a Fifth avenue club and has secured a box for the opera. Bets are being made in social circles as to whether or not they will get in the inner circles. The odds favor them.

It is a far cry from catching rats in a cellar in Scotland to becoming a better darling on Fifth avenue but the Scottish terrier has accomplished it. The terrier is becoming the last word in dogs and the price for them is going upward steadily. Instead of feeding on rats he now eats creamed scallops and marrons glaces and wears diamond studded collars.

Dog fanciers claim that the Scottish terrier is far more popular this winter than the Pekinese. And the Peke is of royal birth too. His forbears have for years occupied an important place in the golden palace of the Chinese empress.

The Boston bull is next in the point of popularity. His price has doubled and by next winter many believe he will be the most popular of all.

New York women who reside on Riverside drive have organized to save Riverside park. They claim that the railroad that has tracks along it is despoiling the beauty of the trees and that the odor from the live stock cars is almost unbearable. The railroad has half way consented to a plan to lower the tracks, but the blasting would go on for about ten years and this, the women claim, would be as much of a nuisance as the other annoyances.

YOUNGEST DEACON BEAUTY IS ENGAGED

Miss Edith Deacon.

On July 7, 1910, the engagement of Edith Deacon to George Lee Peabody, member of one of New England's oldest families, was announced. The engagement was broken by Peabody's death.
